the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are aged 65 and over has increased by 1.5 million (1990–1999) and is projected to increase by a further 1.5 million by 2010 (Office of National Statistics 2000).

There is a growing awareness of the need to develop strategies to meet the needs of the ageing population. The Department of Health (2000) has identified the need to develop a 'new paradigm' of care for the ageing population. This paradigm is based on the concept of 'active ageing', which is defined as 'the process of optimising opportunities for health, participation in society and security in old age' (Department of Health 2000, p. 1).

The Department of Health (2000) has identified a number of key areas for action in order to achieve this paradigm. These include: (1) promoting healthy lifestyles; (2) preventing illness and disability; (3) providing high quality care and support; (4) promoting social inclusion; and (5) ensuring financial security.

The Department of Health (2000) has also identified a number of key challenges that need to be addressed in order to achieve this paradigm. These include: (1) the need to develop a new paradigm of care; (2) the need to develop a new paradigm of financing; (3) the need to develop a new paradigm of delivery; and (4) the need to develop a new paradigm of evaluation.

The Department of Health (2000) has also identified a number of key priorities for action in order to achieve this paradigm. These include: (1) promoting healthy lifestyles; (2) preventing illness and disability; (3) providing high quality care and support; (4) promoting social inclusion; and (5) ensuring financial security.

the 1990s, the number of people with a mental health problem has increased by 50% (Mental Health Foundation 1999).

There is a growing awareness of the need to address the needs of people with mental health problems, and a number of initiatives have been developed to improve the lives of people with mental health problems. The Mental Health Act 1983 was amended in 1996 to give people with mental health problems more rights and to improve the way in which they are treated. The Mental Health Act 1996 was introduced to give people with mental health problems more rights and to improve the way in which they are treated. the 1990s, the number of people with a diagnosis of schizophrenia has increased in the United Kingdom (Meltzer 1996).

There is a growing awareness of the need to improve the lives of people with mental health problems. The Department of Health (1994) has set out a vision of a new mental health service, one that is more humane, more effective and more cost-effective. The vision is based on the following principles:

- People with mental health problems should be treated as individuals, not as a group.
- People with mental health problems should be treated as citizens, not as patients.
- People with mental health problems should be treated as people, not as objects.
- People with mental health problems should be treated as people, not as objects.

The Department of Health (1994) has also set out a vision of a new mental health service, one that is more humane, more effective and more cost-effective.

the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are aged 65 and over has increased by 1.5 million, and the number of people aged 75 and over has increased by 1.2 million (Office of National Statistics 1999).

There is a growing awareness of the need to address the health care needs of the ageing population. The Department of Health (1999) has set out a strategy for the future of health care for older people, and the Department of Social Security (1999) has set out a strategy for the future of social care for older people.

The purpose of this paper is to review the current state of research on the health care needs of older people, and to identify areas for further research.

2. Background

The ageing population is a major public health problem. The number of people aged 65 and over in the UK is expected to increase from 10.5 million in 1999 to 14.5 million in 2029 (Office of National Statistics 1999).

The ageing population is also a major social problem. The number of people aged 65 and over who are living alone has increased from 1.5 million in 1999 to 2.5 million in 2029 (Office of National Statistics 1999).

The ageing population is also a major economic problem. The number of people aged 65 and over who are in receipt of state pension has increased from 5.5 million in 1999 to 7.5 million in 2029 (Office of National Statistics 1999).

The ageing population is also a major health care problem. The number of people aged 65 and over who are in receipt of health care has increased from 3.5 million in 1999 to 5.5 million in 2029 (Office of National Statistics 1999).

The ageing population is also a major social care problem. The number of people aged 65 and over who are in receipt of social care has increased from 1.5 million in 1999 to 2.5 million in 2029 (Office of National Statistics 1999).

The ageing population is also a major public health problem. The number of people aged 65 and over who are in receipt of public health services has increased from 1.5 million in 1999 to 2.5 million in 2029 (Office of National Statistics 1999).

The ageing population is also a major social problem. The number of people aged 65 and over who are living alone has increased from 1.5 million in 1999 to 2.5 million in 2029 (Office of National Statistics 1999).
